BURNT-MATCH HOLDER.

Said to Be a Most Artistic and Original Bit of Fancy Work.

The novel receptacle for burnt matches, shown in the illustration, is one of the most artistic and original bits of fancy work seen for some time. Its novelty lies in the use of one of the small incandescent electric light globes as a balloon, the basket attached to this forming the "holder" proper. They may be obtained at almost any building where this system of lighting is used. The globes in time "burn out" or become defective and can be obtained for a few cents or for nothing. The remaining materials necessary for the balloon are the small Japanese basket, costing two or three cents, a yard of ribbon three-eighths of an inch wide, three skeins of floss, and a scrap of bias velvet or plush.

Make a chain of from forty to fifty stitches, according to size of globe, with the floss, using a small-sized crochet-hook. Throw the thread over to form a long stitch and catch back into the chain; make one chain stitch, then another long stitch, and proceed in this manner across the original chain. Turn and go back across this row in exactly the same way, and proceed thus till a square of the open work is formed. From each corner of this square, crochet a chain which shall be long enough to reach to the top of the basket, from five to six inches; better too long than too short.

A small circular piece of plush or velvet should be used to cover the lower end of the globe. The edges may be caught up about the side with a few long stitches. Fold in the edges of a bias piece of the plush leaving it just wide enough to cover the brass rim at the bottom, and long enough for the ends to fold in and meet. This piece will cover the edge of the circular piece just described, and a few slanting stitches, made with the floss, will draw the two ends together and hold the band firmly in place.

Before adjusting this piece, the crocheted square should be drawn over the globe and each chain caught by a few stitches to the sides of the circular piece which covers the end. After fastening the bias piece, add the same slanting stitches that are used to fasten the ends together (letting this fastening come over one of the crocheted cords) to the plush where each cord comes, as shown in the illustration. Then fasten the ends of the cords to the edge of the basket at equal distances.

Last of all, make a bow with quite a cluster of loops and fasten it to the center of the crocheted square at the top of the globe, adding a short crocheted loop by which to hang the finished holder. The basket may be gilded or bronzed, but as it is intended to represent the actual basket of a balloon, the natural finish is as satisfactory. J. D. Cowles, in Minneapolis Housekeeper.

HOW TO DRAPE LACE.

An Easy and Charming Way to Beautify a Toilet Table.

Lace and muslin are not often seen on toilet tables nowadays, but a graceful way which has lately gained favor is to take a length of muslin, soft silk or lace, allow it to fall to the ground at one side of the table, carry it up to the edge at the other side, and secure it by small tacks, hidden under a couple of smartly-tied broad ribbon bows. If the table has a set of drawers on each side of the open space in front, the drapery conceals one set and reveals the other.

In pretty, simple rooms it is much the fashion to have everything in it of the colored linen, which washes so perfectly. One design for the coverlid is a powdering of large, loosely-tied bows worked in coral stitch in white crewels and silk, with or without a frill of white linen about a quarter of a yard wide. The mantel valance, chair seats, toilet cloth, ottoman cover, as well as the cushion and nightdress cases are in suite. The pretty light blue or pink shades are favorites, but there are greens, yellows and many other colors.

If dull spiritless and stupid: If your blood is thick and sluggish: If your appetite is capricious and uncertain. You need a Sarsaparilla. For best results take De Witt's. It recommends itself. J. K. Jones.

Pure blood means good health. Reinforce it with De Witt's Sarsaparilla. It purifies the blood, cures Eruptions, Eczema, Scrofula and all diseases arising from impure blood. It recommends itself. J. K. Jones.

A MAN AFTER HIS OWN HEART.

AN OBEDIENT BOY.

A Father's Wise Plan for Getting His Money Back.

"Henry, my boy," said the kind father, laying his hand on the shoulder of the only son who had been so long the pride of his life, "have you as yet had any thought of marriage?"

The young man thoughtfully lifted his head, and his frank face betrayed at once the nobleness of his character as he firmly replied: "No, father, I have only been engaged. Nothing more serious than this has ever entered my thoughts."

"Then," said his father, a look of great satisfaction coming into his face, "nothing could be more fortunate. Although I have long been considered well to do, my son, I must tell you the truth. With the exception of the house I have placed in your mother's name, itself heavily mortgaged, nothing remains of my vast fortune but a few paltry dollars. It has long been my desire that you should ally yourself with some family of unquestioned wealth, and now that you tell me that your heart is free I believe I may say that I have found for you the right girl. Her father's vast possessions will undoubtedly descend to her, and thus you will be independent for life."

"Father," said the young man, his face suffused with that lovable obedience which is such a fine attribute of manly character, "I am sure I have always done as you said, and if I can please you in the matter I will gladly do so. But who can it be?"

"You remember, Henry," replied his father, "the architect that built our house?"

"Yes, sir," said Henry; "I know him well. I have often seen him in the back parlor on an evening playing solitaire with the notes you had given him during the day. What has he done with it?"

The good old man's form shook with great joy as he tenderly embraced his boy. "Henry, my dear son," he cried, "I have just heard that he has a marriageable daughter."

How He Got Off.

"Nothing succeeds like success," runs the saying, but there are times when a lack of success has been of great value.

In the time of William III Mr. Tredwell, a poet, was taken before the Earl of Nottingham on suspicion of having treasorably papers. "I am only a poet," protested the poor man, "and these papers are only my roughly sketched play."

The earl, however, carefully looked over the papers in question before liberating the poet. Finally he returned the sheets to the delighted author.

"I have heard your statement," said the earl gravely, "and I have read your play. As I cannot find the least traces of a plot in either the one or the other, you may go free."

With this unflattering tribute to his innocence the poet departed with his plotless play.—Youth's Companion.

A Story of Mark Twain That May or May Not Be True.

This is a story about Mark Twain told by a Hartford man in an up town cafe the other night. It may not be entirely new to every one, but even if it isn't it is good enough to bear repetition.

One beautiful summer morning a few years ago Mark wandered out before breakfast, unconventionally attired in a smoking jacket and slippers and unadorned with either collar or necktie. The humorist is proverbially careless as to his dress, and if it were not for his faithful wife would be as likely as not to appear in public in this garb most of the time.

A few doors from Mr. Clemens' house lives the aged authoress of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." On this particular morning as Mark strolled by Mrs. Stowe's residence he espied the old lady seated upon the veranda. He pushed open the gate, walked in and made a very enjoyable quarter of an hour's call. Then he lounged back to breakfast.

During the progress of the meal he casually alluded to his call upon Mrs. Stowe.

"You don't mean to say that you went into Mrs. Stowe's house in that condition, do you?" ejaculated his despairing wife.

"What condition?" asked Mark blankly.

"Why, without any collar or necktie. What will Mrs. Stowe think of you? You'll have to go over and apologize to her just as soon as you can make yourself presentable."

"All right, my dear," said the crestfallen humorist meekly, "but I don't think she noticed anything out of the way. She didn't speak of it."

A few moments later, breakfast having been finished, Mark disappeared in the direction of the dressing room and shortly afterward dispatched one of his children upon some mysterious errand in which a small parcel played a part.

The child presently returned bearing a note, which Mark after reading carried in triumph to his wife.

"It's all right, my dear," he said, referring to the note. "Mrs. Stowe says she is always glad to see me, even without the customary neckwear, and begs me not to mention the circumstance."

"What have you done now?" queried Mrs. Clemens in a tone of hopeless resignation.

"Why," drawled out the humorist, "I sent my collar and necktie over to Mrs. Stowe, so she would know that I really owned them. You may rest assured now, my dear, that it's all right. She is satisfied. I am sure, that I do have collars and neckties about the house somewhere."—Washington Star.

Just Like a Man.

Fanny—Did you hear about the mistake Hattie Talker made last night? Clara—No. What was it?

"She thought Mr. Vincent was her brother, whom she hasn't seen for a year, and she threw herself into his arms right before everybody."

"What a trying situation for Mr. Vincent!"

"Yes, but he behaved like a man."

"How?"

"He kissed her."—Tit-Bits.

Nothing in It.

Briggs—I hear Von Blumer invited you out to dinner. Quite a saving when you get asked out to dinner, isn't it?

Griggs—Not if it is the sort of dinner we had last night.

Briggs—How's that?

Griggs (sorrowfully)—We played poker afterward.—Brooklyn Life.

Pulverizing.

Teacher—Now construct a sentence with the word "pulverize" in it.

Little Girl—You pulverize your face.

If we were asked the reason why "VIAT" performs such wonderful cures, we would be honest, and say, "We don't know." Ask a scientist why an apple invariably falls downward, and he would say it was due to the law of
